Is Cartier's 'Pasha' a classic?

Cartier's 'Pasha' collection is as classic as it gets- the timepieces have remained just as iconic since their first release in the '30s. Updated with a sleek stainless steel case, this 41mm model has a Swiss-made calibre 1847 MC automatic movement and is accented with a blue dial featuring a distinctive sunray design.

What size is a Cartier Pasha GMT power reserve?

Cartier's current Pasha models measure 30mm, 35mm, or 41mm, but in my eyes, 38mm was the sweet spot for the design. This one measures a wonderful 10mm thin, and the T-shaped "Vendôme" lugs give it a 44.5mm span across the wrist. For me, these dimensions are supremely comfortable and make the Pasha GMT Power Reserve one of my go-to watches.

What makes the new Pasha de Cartier unique?

True to its first iteration in 1985, the new Pasha de Cartier is amplified by originality and uniquely powerful, bringing together elements that go beyond classic watchmaking.

Is Cartier Pasha a good watch?

The 41mm-wide case is only 9.5mm-thick. It might not be a traditional diver's watch in terms of performance, but it is thin enough to wear comfortably and out of the way, which is highly valued by a lot of wearers these days. While it isn't to everyone's taste, the Cartier Pasha dial is distinctive and effective.
