I think that there a lot of Monacos out there of the "04 to "07 vintage which have a double set of house batteries. That is there are two sets of four golf-cart type 6v batteries in a series parallel set up. One of the four 6v-golf-cart setups is in a tray in the big, (standard) battery compartment and the other tray contains the chassis batteries.

All battery systems require some maintenance such as checking battery hold downs and terminal tightness from road vibration, checking for terminal corrosion, checking for frayed wires and the like. We have been using AGM batteries in our race cars and show cars for over 15 years simply for protection in the event of an accident, easy to charge ...

We have a 2002 Monaco 40 PST and the 8D battery is only about a year old. Unfortunately we store our coach without power and have to start the genset to charge batteries couple times a month. I do have solar panel for the house batteries charge but found out the line going to the chassis battery didn't have a fuse installed.

LiFePO4 batteries charge profile is something like (let's talk a 100Ahr battery for example, if you by two, double the Amps) 14.4 Volts for 30 minutes @ 50-100 Amps, (what they call 0.5C to 1.0C, where C is the battery capacity - 100 ...

If you want the best coach batteries then Trojan T105's. If you want the best chassis batteries Interstate Group 31 950 AGM's (Tom's recommendation). BUT if you want to go whole hog do a lithium (LiPO4) coach conversion with a giant solar array on the roof and Blue Sea charging system.

Back to BASICS. You do NOT have any "FUSE" between the batteries and the Cut OFF. The power (primarily focused on HOUSE) goes directly to the Battery BUSS. Then, from that side....there is protection. THIS IS STANDARD FOR MONACO....at least on my Camelot (2009). The concept was also used on the later Dynasty and up...

The best bang for the buck is GC2 golf cart batteries. They are designed for constant charge/discharge and very heavy duty. They are 6 volt so you have to add a short jumper cable between each pair. A GC2 battery measures 10.3" length, 7.11" wide. I've been able to squeeze four of them into a Monaco battery tray.

I have a 40 Monaco Windsor and need new house batteries. The batteries that are in the motor coach now are 6 volt Interstate Battery U2200s. What brand would everyone recommend for performance and reliability? The batteries that are in now have what looks like a bulge on top where the positive an...
