

What do Mongolians call the Seven Luminaries?

The term was originally borrowed from Chinese 七曜. Under the influence of Chinese culture, the Mongolians call the Seven Luminaries doloon garig doloon garigor doloon garag doloon garag 'the seven planets'. According to an Inner Mongolian dictionary, the Seven Luminaries can be systematised as follows, with at least four sets of names:

How many luminaries are there in Mongolia?

According to an Inner Mongolian dictionary, the Seven Luminaries can be systematised as follows, with at least four sets of names: The first two columns show the familiar Tibetan and Indian names, as used in the days of the week. The third column is an exact equivalent of the Chinese names, consisting of an element/phase plus the word od 'star'.

What does the star above Mizar mean in Mongolian astrology?

The names of the celestial bodies come from Sanskrit and are largely used in Mongolian, but in an unofficial way. The star located above Mizar in the Big Bear constellation is prominent in Mongolian astrology. It symbolises the recovery and protection star. According to legend, it was placed there by Tengeriin, the god of heaven, to protect Mizar.

Does Mongolia have a 10 MW solar farm?

Mongolia has connected a 10 MW solar farm to the grid, as part of a plan to deploy 40.5 MW of solar and wind capacity in the nation's western regions. The Asian Development Bank (ADB) and the government of Mongolia have inaugurated a 10 MW solar power plant in Mongolia's Govi-Altai province.

Which element/phase is not used in Mongolian planetary names?

However, there is one element/phase that is not normally used in the names of the planets in Mongolian: the element/phase to`mo`rt`m`r` 'iron' is dropped in favour of altan alta` as the name of Venus. In scientific use, the planetary names in Mongolian now usually use the Indian names:

Is there a connection between Chinese and Mongolian astrology?

One tradition, based on the birth years in the Chinese calendar, concerns the link between Mongolian people and the Great Bear as one star of this constellation is attributed to each of them. Chinese and Mongolian calendars have some similarities (the Mongolian calendar is a lunar calendar).
